

FORMER FEDERAL SENATOR RODNEY N CULLETON Constitutional violations to the Commonwealth

admitted by the Attorney-General in FOI responses

The Australian Attorney-General confirmed that there was no legal basis for authority to remove the authority of the Australian people by destruction of the Great Seal of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1973 under Gough Whitlam's hand.

This is evidenced through the Freedom of Information request by Rodney Culleton, answered by Joanna Baker of the Department of the Attorney-General in October 5 2021, when Mr. Culleton asked "regarding the authority to terminate the Great Seal of the Commonwealth of Australia, I request the instrument that overrides, suspends or terminates the "indissoluble Federal Commonwealth under the Crown of the United Kingdom...". Ms Baker responded "no relevant documents were identified" and "I am also satisfied that the documents do not exist within the department's records holdings." which confesses that there is no authority to remove, suspend or substitute the authority of the Australian people with government authority.
